A History of California: The American Period

Robert Glass CLELAND (1885 - 1957)

This work may be considered the companion volume to Charles E. Chapman's A History of California: The Spanish Period, which tells the story of first Spanish and then Mexican California, from first discovery until the Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo in 1848 ceded ownership to the United States of America. This second volume surveys the faint awakenings of American interest in settling California...the first adventurous immigrants...English ambitions....the Bear Flag revolt; and how a strong-willed President acquires California as the fruit of war. The gold rush follows....Statehood...."and a time of social and political adjustment as we reclaim an empire from the wilderness, and lay the material foundations for a splendid state." ~Summary by Steven Seitel, soloist; quote by author, Robert Cleland

Genre(s): Modern (19th C)
